No matter how little the meat-or even if there is no meat-Betzol makes the gravy good and rich, thick and brown. Betzol is the chief weapon in the housewife's economyarmoury. Here's one way to use Betzol with meat :

Pork Fillets with Onions.

Fry the fillets until properly cooked. Put into saucepan required amount of onions cut finely, with enough water to cover, boil for 20 minutes. Remove fillets from fryingpan or meat tin, pour onions along with water in which they were boiled into meat tin, take one small dessert-spoonful of Betzol Gravg Powder, make into paste, mix with onions, stir all together, and fry for a couple of minutes.

For use with vegetables Betzol is indispensable in the kitchen. It puts backbone into the meatless meal—gratifies

MR. NUGENT AND THE POLICE.

Mr. NUGENT asked the Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland if he was aware that on the 25th April, '1916, a number of persons charged with locting were taken to Store street Station, Dublin; that these persons were allowed to go free when the looted property was taken from them; if he would state what number of gold chains and other articles of jewellery were found on the prisoners; if he was aware that a side of bacon taken from one of the prisoners was cooked taken from one of the prisoners was cooked and eaten in the station; if he would state what inspector was in charge of the station at the time, and if he saw that the property was properly accounted for; also, whether he was aware that during the disturbances a conwas aware that during the distributes a con-siderable quantity of whiskey and other in-toxicating liquor, as well as tea, which had been looted, was brought into Store street Station; if he would say what quantity of liquor and tea was surrendered by each constable, and how it was afterwards disposed of, and if any of the liquor was drunk in the station.

Mr. DUKE—I have no information which supports the suggestions in the question, but if the hon, member finds himself able to furnish me with definite particulars of the alleged misconduct they will be investigated.

Mr. NUGENT—Will the right hon, gentleman

Mr. NUGENT—Will the right hon, gentleman consider even now an inquiry into this matter, in order not to cloak the officers responsible?

Mr. DUKE—I do not think there is any ground for the suggestion that there is anything to cloak, and there is certainly no ground for suggesting that there is a desire to cloak anything I have told the hon, gentleman, and if he furnishes me with particulars of any charges he desires to make they will be investigated.

Mr. Healy—That is so. The people of Dublin thought that handsome compensation would be made to Alderman Kelly immediately.
The Attorney-General (Sir Frederick Smith) The Attorney-General (Sir Frederick Smith) said he was anxious to arrive at a method which would lead to the settlement of the various claims. There were, however, other actions by Mr. Kelly pending in other courts in which some of the claims re-appeared. He would agree to the claims being heard by the War Losses Commission, subject to any other actions being stayed.

Mr. Healy agreed.

The case was accordingly adjourned, a date.

Irish Parties and Settlement.

The two constitutional parties in Ireland have given prompt replies to the Prime Minister's proposals for an Irish settlement, and those replies have at once clarified and complicated the situation. Mr. Lloyd George suggested two solutions. The Irish Unionist Party has promised to give "careful consideration" to the first and has ignored the second. The Nationalist Parhamentary Party has rejected the first in the most emphatic terms and has welcomed the second with open arms. The immediate consequence is that, as we had immediate consequence is that, as we had That offensive was conducted chiefly in the predicted confidently, the Government's region between Gorizia and the sea. Mr. Lloyd George said that directed against the stretch of country, he would not embody this scheme in a some twenty miles long, lying along the Bill unless it were assured of "something Isonzo, north of Gorizia to Tolmino. All like a second reading acceptance" from this is very difficult hill country, with the both Irish parties. The Nationalist Party obstacle of the upper reaches of the refuses to give it even a first reading Isonzo added. The Austrians held the acceptance; therefore, no measure will be entire left bank, with the exception of based on it. The Government's head is one of General Cadorna's primary surprise in Ireland. The Government's main scheme is based on partition, and partition in any shape or form is hateful to a large majority of Irishmen, and to the whole of Nationalist Ireland. It was the Nationalist Party's acceptance last year of the principle of partition that reduced it to its present position of impotence, Mr. Redmond knew perfectly well that, if he should accept the new partition scheme, he would sign his party's death warrant. He has rejected partition, and to that extent the situation is simplified. The Home

In this respect, we fancy, the expectations of some Nationalist politicians have been heavily disappointed There will be no outcry in the United States against either the British Government or the Unionists of Ulster. America to take fright at Sir Albert Stanley's will realise clearly that the failure of the Government's scheme is due neither to English insincerity nor to the bigotry of we believe, prescribed by Government northern Irishmen. The Government was manifestly sincere, and Unionist Ulster larly maintained public demand through was not unready to sacrifice cherished convictions.

We assume that when Mr. Lloyd George makes his statement next week his alterna tive schemes will have been reduced to one. The partition plan is dead, and the only hope of settlement lies, as we have insisted always, in agreement among Irishmen. No doubt, Mr. Lloyd George will now offer to summon immediately "a convention of Irishmen of all parties for the purpose of producing a scheme of Irish self-government." Mr. Redmond is prepared to recommend this proposal "most earnestly" to his followers. Mr. William O'Brien will accept it joyfully as the fulfilment of a patient hope. The Ulster Unionists, having promised to consider the Unionists, having promised to consider the them and have reached the limit of conmust continue to warn the public against antimely optimism. What, for instance, will be the attitude of the Sinn Fein Party to ne project of a national convention? If they should agree to be represented, they would abandon what seems to be the chief article convention could not fail to increase the mensely strong in itself and a line which

prices have risen to so great a degree—apart from the country's natural resources—that there have actually been food riots. That is abandon what seems to be the chief article of their curious creed—the claim to an independent appearance for Ireland at the Peace Conference. If they were not represented, the convention would not fulfil Mr. Redmond's condition of finding a place for Irishmen "of all creeds, interests, and parties." Again, the inclusion of Irish Republicans in a national for the lack of organisation than for any sion of Irish Republicans in a national patriotic person who is well-to-do de convention could not fail to increase the reluctance of the Northern Unionists to take part in such an assembly. The idea of a conference is so attractive on general grounds—it has the air of brushing aside so many difficulties—that we must not invite disappointment by ignoring the numerous obstacles that beset its path. We can only say for the moment that he set in the fact of the Social as yet of the noment to such a second plan must be decided by the Nationalist Party, so the fate of its second plan must be decided by the Unionists of Ireland. Of one thing, however, we are certain—that both northern and southern Unionists would make their presence at a convention strictly conditional on the postponement of any reconstruction of the postponement of the second of the northern and southern Unionists would make their presence at a convention strictly conditional on the postponement of the northern and southern Unionists would make their presence at a convention strictly conditional on the postponement of the second plan must be desided by the Unionists of Ireland. Of one thing, however, we are certain—that both northern and southern Unionists would make their presence at a convention strictly conditional on the postponement of the second and any thing about it in gland. The farther we get away from the difference between a member who was at the difference between a member who was at its postpone the difference between a member who was at the difference between a member who was at it important the difference between a member who was at it is difference between a member who was at it important the difference between a member who was at t strictly conditional on the postponement of any reconstruction of Irish government until the end of the war.

The Italian Front.

The Italian offensive on a wide front between the head of the Adriatic and the Alps is at once a consequence of the Franco-British offensive in the west and a powerful aid to it. That it should be launched at all is a notable tribute to the effect of the Allied reconstruction of Irish government what you do not know anything about it in England. The farther we get away from the fining-line, the more difficult it is to understand, and the more important it is to understand. You may think that it is not a matter that desperately concerns you. You see your provision shops apparently full. You have faith in your crops. Ladies and gentlemen, it is the greatest possible peril that confronts you if you go on in the same way. I wish I had it in my power to make it real to you. I think you will have to east back your thoughts to what your ancestors went through in the middle of the last century, when people as they went about leant against gates and walls because of weakness due to hunger; when people went the last century, when people as they went about feant against gates and walls because of weakness due to hunger; when people went of weakness due to hunger; when people went of weakness due to hunger; when people went out into the fields at night and drew a little of the blood of live bullocks to mix with their meal because they were starving. But the fortunate, the happy thing about the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we realise the truth of the asying: "Ye are members one of another," we are safe; but we are only safe under those conditions. By your loyalty to one another, by your pride in Ireland, see that she does not suffer the worst in this crisis which is before us. (Applause.)

The Lord Chancellor put to Miss Robins some thoughtful questions which her lecture had suggested. Regarding a "Win the War" (Cookery Book at 2d., he said that if a supply was obtained Lady O'Brien would take charge of the books for any persons who wanted them, mensely strong in itself and a line which they cannot afford to be a conded by Dr. Goff, Miss Robins, acknowledging the role and walls because of weakness' due to hunger; when people as they went about feant against gates and walls because of weakness' due to hunger; when people went out into the fields at night and drew a little of the blood of live bullocks to mix with their meal because they were starving. But the fortunate, the happy thing about the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if we take it in time, if we call the present situation is this: that, if

The lecture on "Food Economy" to be delivered by Miss Elisabeth Robins at the Mansion House, Dublin, this evening at 8 o'clock, should prove particularly interesting at the present time. Miss Robins is an American writer of note, and a lecturer under the Ministry of Food. Her lecture will show how articles of food too scarce or too dear to be got can be substituted by others equally good, but more easily obtained. Sir John R. O'Connell, LL.D., will preside, and the meeting will be addressed by leading citizens.

The fact that Mr. Redmond's rejection has killed the scheme does not obscure the fineness of the orders for delivery at their convenience during the summer. If they will do this, there will be no necessity for them to raise prices—as they sometimes do, to raise prices-as they sometimes do, quite honestly-in order to check a sudden the war. As will be seen from Sir John Lonsdale's As will be seen from Sir John Lonsdate state of the Prime Minister, the Ulster letter to the Prime Minister, the Ulster Unionists have decided to refer the Irish proposals of the Government for Home proposals of the Government for Home proposals of the Ulster Unionist Council. He said before I touch on the subject which has brought us all together, I desire to welcome our friends to take fright at Sir Albert Stanleys warning. Pit-bank prices are still, we believe, prescribed by Government order, and, with an even and regularly maintained public demand through the summer, the merchants need only add the cost of transport and a reasonable return for their services.

Rule to the Ulster Unionist Council. Rule to the Ulster Unionist Council. Unlike the Nationalist Party (who have us all together, I desire to welcome our friends, rejected those proposals), Sir John and his colleagues have little inclination to the alternative proposal of a convention, which alternative proposal of a convention to the bublin Metropolitan Police, who we are delighted to see on our parade ground today.

THE LECTURE taught Englishmen to beware of hasty judgments in regard to Irish affairs, which are so often decided by "imponderables" whose importance they have no means of gauging. "Let the Irish settle the business for themselves" is the general feeling. Only a revival of Irish recruiting on a substantial scale would now revive the control of the substantial scale would now revive the control of the substantial scale would now revive the control of Miss Robins said, in part, that the crisis was their leaders will give a careful hearing to the Government's next appeal. The Prime Minister is so rare a visitor to the House of Commons newadays that his entry during question time prepared members for some important statement. This turned out to be the announcement personally our thanks ing here to-day, and here to-day, and members for some important statement. This turned out to be the announcement that the Imperial Cabinet is not to be a transient phenomenon, but is to be continued after the war. Its members, including one representative of the people of India, will meet annually, or oftener if occasion requires, to consider foreign policy and other matters affecting the Empire as a whole; but there will be no interference with local autonomy. The announcement caused less of a sensation than its constitutional importance would warrant, probably because it is only the logical sequel to the decisions of the Imperial War Cabinet already published.

The news from Petrograd indicates that the people of Russia are awaking to the danger threatening their newly-found freedom. Another hopeful feature is that the Gommittee of the Irish Police Receiptne, and that the presentations which the great Russian generals are to meet in the great Russian generals are to meet in council. Henceforward Home Rule proportions. Henceforward Home Rule for an undivided Ireland must be accepted as the alternative to the unimpaired maintenance of the Act of Union. In another way, too, the situation is clarified. For many years Irish Nationalists and English Liberals have conspired to represent Unionist Ulster as the villain in the long-drawn melodrama of Irish politics. INTERESTING ADDRESSES Yesterday, at the Depôt in the Phonix Park ninety officers and men of the Royal Irish Con-stabulary and Dublin Metropolitan Police were resented with certificates of honour for their conspicuous service in the suppression of the re-bellion of 1916. The presentation was made by Sir Maurice Dockrell, on behalf of the Irish Sir Maurice Dockrell, on behalf of the Irish Police and Constabulary Recognition Fund. It took place in the barrack square, where 300 of the Royal Irish Constabulary and 150 of the Dublin Metropolitan Police were paraded, along with their bands. The former were under the command of Assistant-Inspector-General Pearson; the latter were under the orders of Chief Superintendent Dunne. Sir Maurice Dockrell hasded the certificates to 43 of the Royal Irish Constabulary, among whom were County Inhanded the certificates to 45 of the Royal Irish Constabulary, among whom were County Inspectors Holmes and Heard, and District Inspectors Mercer and Moriarty; and to 47 of the Dublin Motropolitan Police, who included several officers of the Detective Division. The certificate was designed by Mr. Richard Orpea, of the Royal Hibernian Academy. It was

Mr. William O'Brien's friends are pointing out that he has all along recommended an "All-Ireland" Conforence or Convention as a preliminary to a Home Rule settlement. In this connection I am now able to state authoritatively that, as anticipated, there is no foundation for the recent report of Mr. O'Brien's intended resignation from Parliament.

Keen interest was taken by the United States newspapers in the Government's will not be forgotten should either of these unfortunate events occur. CRAONNE. Yesterday British troops completed the capture of Bullecourt. Sixty prisoners were taken there in the course of the day, and the village is now entirely in our hands. On the French front the enemy has suspended his attacks at Laffaux Mill (south-west of Laon) after further vain efforts during Wednesday night. The French themselves have had successes east of Craonne

A Dublin citizen of eminence in the financial world, but who for the present desires to remain anonymous, expressed the opinion that from the Home Rule point of view the proposal of the Prime Minister was not so good as the pre-vious Home Rule Bill, because under the new scheme the six counties of North-East Ulster were to be permanently excluded. The pro-posed Council of Ireland would not have definite powers of including these counties at all; it could only frame a plan which would be carried out by consent, and, in view of all the circumstances of the country, that part of the scheme might be considered as dead. ANNUAL MEETINGS.

The conclusions of the Imperial War Cabinet are of necessity secret, but there is one aspect of them which we feel ought to be communicated to the House without delay. The Imperial War Cabinet was unanimous that the new procedure had been of service, not only to all its members, but to the Empire, and that it ought not to be allowed to fall into desuetude.

Accordingly, at the last session, I are from near the firing line. The matter was being closely watched.

Mr. ANDERSON asked the Minister of Munitions whether he had refused to meet deputions whether he had refused to meet deputions with a view to a possible settlement, and with a view to a possible settlement, and whether he would state the grounds of his refusal.

The matter was accould intervene by sea. That was another of the long series of miscalculations. American ships are now in the war area hunting down the pests of the seas. The danger period is not over. Nothing in the latest more favourable Admiralty returns justifies an easy optimism. We have before us weeks, and it may be months, of privation such as this generation has never experienced, but that knowledge can provide small comfort for the peoples of the Central Empires under the moral and economic ban of the civilised world. The latest more favourable will be able to obtain full information about all aspects of Imperial affairs, and to determine, by consultation together, the policy of the Empire, in its most vital FRUNT.

At the last meeting of the Galway Urban Council, Mr. John Griffin moved a resolution that the whole control of the salmon and other fisheries in Lough Corrib should be taken over by the Food Controller. It was pointed out that salmon, trout, and various descriptions of fish were leaving the lake in vast quantities, and were thus lost for food consumption. This was mainly due to the absence of fishermen, who had joined the Navy and other services. Mr. Griffin's resolution was passed.

THE JOHN MITCHEL PRECEDENT. THE JOHN MITCHEL PRECEDENT.

Mr. T. M. HEALY drew the attention of the Speaker to the case of John Mitchel, who, he said, was convicted of a felony, and went to Australia, and there escaped to America, where his grandson welcomed Mr. Balfour the other day. John Mitchel, he said, was elected under precisely analogous circumstances, and he (Mr. Healy) believed that Mr. Disraeli immediately moved for the records affecting Mitchel's conviction. He submitted that it would be in order, as a matter of privilege, to move for the records in the case of the member for South Longford, if there was an exact precedent in the case of John Mitchel, and to this end he suggested that some little time should be allowed to examine the precedents.

Mr. GINNELL pointed out that the Habeas of Corpus Act was abrogated in Ireland, not by statute, but under the Defence of the Realm Act, and therefore this gentleman had no remedy whatever.

The SPEAKER said that the question was whether the Court which convicted this gentleman was a competent Court or not. If the second is the second control of the court which convicted this gentleman was a competent Court or not.

THE FOOD REGULATIONS. TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES. TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir.—Referring to the statement in a leading article in your issue of Friday, the 11th inst., that "at this moment even the Government's Food Regulations are a dead letter outside Dublin and Belfast," I beg to say that this is incorrect as regards Limerick. A public meeting was held in this city early in April, the object being to protest against extravagance, waste, or any unnecessary consumption of food, and a committee was formed. A large percentage of this city and county are A large percentage of this city and c strictly adhering to the letter of t

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The boilermakers from the Great Northern Railway Works, who have been on atrike aince Saturday last, have been informed by their Executive that the report of the recent arbitration has been issued, and the Executive advised them to return to work. Pending the receipt of official word to this effect by the works manager, the men have not resumed, but it is expected that the men will return to-day. The engineers in the same employ have withdrawn their motices to cease work.

His Highness the Rajah of Sarawak died is now yesterday at Circneester. Sir Charles Jeles on Brooks was the second Rajah, and will be the interest that the receipt of official word to this effect by the works manager, the men have not resumed, but it is expected that the men will return to-day. The engineers in the same employ have withdrawn their words and the same employ have withdrawn their the same employ have withdrawn their words.

The "7 o'clock" is a really dependable razor at a popular price, and the ideal razor for the soldier or sailor. It is so constructed that it can be stropped and cleaned without removing the blade, and it is always ready for instant use. With a single touch it springs open and locks rigidly for stropping or cleaning, and with another touch it instantly snaps together into accurately adjusted shaving position. Everything is compact, even to the attaching of a special strop in the case itself and the inclusion of sufficient renewal blades for a year's shaving. It is the only safety razor costing less than a guinea which can be stropped without removing the blade.

If you buy one you are entitled to have another, sent free, as your own gift, to any friend on service. Your dealer will explain the details to you. Ask him.

Talks by Me about Myself

CPEECH is silvern, silence is golden," saith the sage.

But when gold is so scarce silver is not to be despised. Though what I have to say may be merely silvern, it is golden to those that hear me,

This consideration impels me to speak, though I am given to silence. Though modest, I immolate that quality under the stress of the times.

It is to your interest that I should tell you about myself. I am one of the élite in fact I am the aristocrat in the long procession of a certain section of public servants who are elbowing for popular acclaim in these strenuous days.

A piper marchant is my crest-"Multum in parvo" my motto. I am very popular with all classes. I am in nearly everybody's mouth
